Not illustrated. 1865 Excerpt: .a state of intoxication, he had slipped over a strip of orange-peel, lying on the pavement; and when he was taken up, it was discovered that his leg was broken. And in that hospital for many days he lay in agony. The evil condition of his blood, consequent upon his drinking propensities, showed itself in the difficulty with which the most skilful surgeons could get the wound to heal; but their low regimen, cleanliness, and the pure air of the ward, so different from that which he had lately been accustomed to breathe, at length proved successful, and the surgeons ventured to hope that he would recover. Whilst he lay there, racked by pain, a ministering angel daily visited him--a woman, neither young nor beautiful, unless the peaceful gentle look on her worn face might be considered beauty--heard the fearful oaths with which he cried out in his pain--for infidels can take the Holy Name into their lips, to add pungency to a curse--and from his loud impatient ravings she soon gathered the condition of his mind. She saw that this poor wretch, now being rescued from the jaws of death, was ignorant as an idiot of the life to come, without the idiot s excuse that his poor mind cannot conceive of it. And so well did this good woman know the value of the soul thus courting destruction, that, instead of turning from him with horror, she felt a deep desire to rescue him,...
